

Note about Forum Philosophicum

MISSION STATEMENT

Forum Philosophicum is an international peer-reviewed scholarly journal devoted to a wide range of questions relating to Christian philosophy. We look for fresh and insightful approaches to the problems with which Christian thought has struggled throughout the centuries and which it faces today. We publish papers that adopt a philosophical stance while respecting the authority of Christian Revelation. We also welcome critical approaches towards the interaction of philosophy with faith. Hence we are particularly interested in contributions that discuss the methodological issues raised by attempts to practice philosophy within perspectives governed by faith. We seek to encourage discussion of the role and vitality of all of the various traditions of Christian thought, and are happy to receive papers offering historical insight into those traditions. Alongside this, we are open to investigations of non-Christian views of the entanglements of philosophy with faith, and are actively looking for papers that explore the phenomenon of faith from diverse philosophical perspectives.

Forum Philosophicum is published by The Jesuit University Ignatianum in Cracow. Its two annual issues, published in June and December, together furnish around 30 papers. Until recently, these were published in a range of languages recognized as appropriate for international conferences, but as of 2011 the journal has accepted papers exclusively in English. It is, in its basic version, a traditional print-based journal, but also has a parallel online version, available via the EBSCO Academic Search Complete electronic database (since vol. 6, 2001) and the Philosophy Documentation Center online subscription service (since vol. 1, 1996). Selected texts are published in open access on the journal's website. The journal is also indexed in, among others, The Philosopher's Index, The Central European Journal of Social Sciences and Humanities (CEJSH), and the PhilPapers database.

We are happy to publish papers with special symbols, Greek or Hebrew citations, and formal logical symbolism, typeset in LaTeX. All papers accepted for publication that are authored by a non-native speaker of English will be examined by a specialist native-speaker language consultant familiar with the peculiarities of philosophical English.

REVIEW PROCESS

The review process for papers submitted to Forum Philosophicum adheres to the following guidelines:

1. A paper, submitted to the Editor, may be returned to the author if it does not meet the criteria described in the section Submissions, or if it does not discuss a topic within a subject-area of interest to Forum Philosophicum.
2. Each paper will be sent to two reviewers for blind review. At least one of the reviewers must be affiliated in a different country than the author.
3. Members of the Board, including the Editor, are not allowed to write reviews. No specialist who is known to be related to the author or who may reasonably be thought to have collaborated with the author or supervised his/her work is eligible as a reviewer.
4. Reviewers are explicitly asked to focus on the research and philosophical merits of a paper; they are told that any linguistic and/or technical deficiencies pertaining to an otherwise good paper may be dealt with separately by the editors.

5. The reviewers are asked to conclude their review with a clear opinion, stating that a paper is (a) publishable without revisions, or (b) may be published after minor revisions have been introduced, or (c) may be resubmitted after major revision, or (d) should not be considered for publication at all.
6. The final decision concerning which of the papers that have obtained at least one positive review are to be published is taken by the Editor-in-Chief, in consultation with the Editorial Board.
7. The names and affiliations of all reviewers are published annually in the Autumn issue and at the website of the journal.

LEGAL ISSUES

COPYRIGHT Authors of papers that have been accepted will be asked to grant the publisher—i.e. The Jesuit University Ignatianum in Cracow Editions Department—the royalty-free right to first publication, as well as a non-exclusive right to distribute and archive the paper in electronic format, including through organizations specializing in the distribution and archiving of scholarly journals.

It should be understood that the fact of publication constitutes the sole form of remuneration to be received by authors. Authors will also receive three print copies of the issue containing the published paper and a PDF file of their paper, which may be redistributed in private way, if deemed necessary by the author for the sake of the advancement of his/her career, and providing that the copyright retained by the The Jesuit University Ignatianum in Cracow Editions Department is respected.

The Jesuit University Ignatianum in Cracow Editions Department retains the copyright for the results of the work of its editorial team, including the graphical representation of the text published in the journal, as visible in the printed version and in the PDF files produced by the publisher. Papers first published in Forum Philosophicum may be republished, providing that all of the following conditions are met:

1. Forum Philosophicum is mentioned by the author as the place of initial publication;
2. The paper is published in an altered or re-edited version.
3. The graphical presentation produced by Forum Philosophicum, including typesetting or elements thereof, is not used.

Examples of actions this policy permits authors to carry out are as follows:

- sending a copy of the author's paper published in Forum Philosophicum to a specialist;
- e-mailing the PDF file of the author's paper published in Forum Philosophicum to a person who is a current or potential reviewer of the author's academic achievements;

- republishing a re-edited version of the author's paper in a book while mentioning Forum Philosophicum as the place of initial publication.

Examples of actions not allowed by this policy are as follows:

- posting the PDF file of the author's article at her/his website;
- posting the PDF file of an article published in Forum Philosophicum to an open-access academic database;
- republishing a re-edited version of the author's paper in a book without mentioning Forum Philosophicum as the place of initial publication;
- photo-mechanically reproducing the author's paper in a book—even if Forum Philosophicum is mentioned as the place of initial publication.

FINANCING All authors whose research is supported by special sources of financing, such as grants, research programs, etc., are asked to prepare an information note mentioning the support they have received.

ORIGINALITY Forum Philosophicum will only accept manuscripts of papers not previously published in, or submitted to and still currently under review by, another journal or collection.

The Polish Ministry of Science and Higher Education requires the editors of all Polish journals which they evaluate to remind authors of certain basic rules of scientific honesty—even though we strongly believe that the authors submitting papers to Forum have no intention whatsoever of breaking those rules, and in spite of the fact that the rules pertaining to joint authorship are rarely applicable to papers submitted to a philosophical journal. Thus, we remind authors that it is not acceptable to submit papers that reflect anything other than original research or reflections conducted by the author himself/herself. Concealing the true authorship of a part of a paper, even if the paper is in itself an original contribution, also constitutes a breach of such rules. Since all papers are reviewed by specialists, those seeking to make a submission should work on the assumption that all instances of such plagiarizing or ghost-writing will be detected. For jointly authored papers, a clear indication must be given in the paper itself of the manner and extent of each and every author's contribution. Papers with so-called "guest authors," whose contribution to the thesis of the paper is actually minimal, cannot be accepted. All cases of academic dishonesty, if detected, will be reported to the organizations with which the authors are affiliated.
